Scrohlous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrohlous contamination until hey were painfully afflicting, have been radically curved in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth.
Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those ueleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

The Great Commanders. Turning from the great Prussian Generals, briefly sketched yesterday, to those now in command of the armies of France, we must begin with Marshal McMahon, Duke of Magenta, as he is unquestionably the most conspcious for military ability. This eminent soldier, whose name proclaims his descent from a warlike race, is in the 63rd year of his age. He recived his military education at Saint Cyr, from which he passed to the Staff Corps. Taking part in the expedition to Algiers, he was subsequently aide-de-camp of General Achard, at the siege of Antwerpt. In Africa be rose rapidly in his profession, attaining in 1852, the rank of General of Division. In 1855 he commanded an infantry division in Marshal Bosquet's corps in the Crimes, in which capacity he took a personal part in the famous and successful assault on the Malakoff, establishing himself in that work, and holding it notwithstanding the repeated and prolonged efforts of the Russians to dislodge him. For this service he was decorated with the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, and on the return of peace he was made a senator, In 1857 he returned to Africa, were he was soon raised to the position of Commander-in-Chief of the sea and land forces in Algeria. To of the sea and land forces in algeria. It the Italian war, however, he owes his chief promenance before the European public. Holding the position of Com-mander of the Second Army Corps, but really by the side of the Emperor, he rendered at the great, and for some time very dubious, battle of Magenta, services so important that he was named by his Sovereign, on the field of battle, Duke of Magenta, and Marshal of France. In 1864 he received the appointment of Governor-General of Algeria, and from which he has recently been called to take an important command in the pre-sent war. The Duke of Magenta is represented as combining rapidity of judge-ment with calmness of temper and firmness of purpose in a remarkable degree.
Although never a favorite with the Emperor, his abilties, character, and services have neither been unappreciated nor unrewarded. It may be interesting to recall the fact that he was the officer chosen to represent France at the Coronation of the present King of Prussia in 1861, a position which he sustained with great pomp and dignity. Marshal Bazaine's military fame is of more recent origin and of a more equivocal character, dating from the Mexican war, of which he has himself written a history. Descended from an old military family, he was born in 1811, and served in Africa and Spain. Returning to Africa, he, in 1850 obtained the command of a regiment of the Foreign Legion, and at the outbreak of the Crimoan war was appointed to command a brigade. His name is men-tioned several times in the dispatches as that of a skilful and brave officer and in 1855 he was made General of and in 1800 he was made General of Division. He subsequently commanded the French expedition against K aburn. When in 1862, while the civil war in America was at its height, the Emperor of the French, unable to induce Great Britain to him hym in tenguities of the of the French, unable to induce Great Britain to join him in recognition of the Southern Confederacy, conceired the idea of placing Maximitian on the throne of Mexico, it was this same General Bazaine who received the command of the first division of infantry in General Forey's expedition. In Outober of the f Howing year, Forey was recalled, and Bazaine was advance d to the chief command. In July 1863 ne led his army into the city of M xico, and commenced a series of vigor as ope anone in order to expel President Juarez, whom he drove to the frontier of the Republic, and whom he apparently believed he effectively expelled. This, at least, is the only as umption on which a number of executions of duly commissioned officers of the Ropublic, who had been taken prisoners in the regular war, can be explained. Tois return to practices worthier of a semi-savage Hispano-American settlement than of the mag-nanimous French people, was the more regretable, inasmu h as it was afterwards made the excuse for the execution of the unhappy Max milian, whose death was said to be a just reprisal for similar murders committed under the French murders committed under the Franch occupation in his name. Goo. Begine did not keep up a good understanding with Maximilian, who at length avoided him, to follow finally a course dimensional distribution. ted by a sense of personal h nour The tragical end of the en erprise is known. B.zaine's conduct was severely ert it cised on his return to France; but the Emperor protected him against public sentiment, rewarding his more than questionable services in Mexico with the rank and emoluments of a Senator and the pe manent command of the Third Army Corps, and honorary Commander-in-chief of the Imperial Guard. Thus was demerit rewarded! Marshal Canrobert, whose name became familiar to the world in connection with the Crimean war, was born in 1509 of a good Breton family, and, like MoMahon, was educated at Si Oyr. He win his successive steps of promotion by hard fighting in Algeria, was wounded in the arshalt of Constantine, fulfilling the prediction of Colonel Combes, who foll st his side, that there was a luture for that young man. In 1853 the had reached the rank of General of Division, and when the Crimean war broke out he was appoint ad to command the first division of the Array of the East, which, it will be remembered, was demerit rewarded! Marshal Can-suffered very severely from cholers. At the famous bettle of the Alma he was wounded, but not severely, in the arm. Two days later the chief command was transferred to him, and Canrobert faced the difficulties of his new position with remarkable firmness and patience. A disagreement with Lord Raglan led to Canrobert's resignation of the chief command and a return to his corps. Two months afterwards he left the Crimea and was made a Marshal of France. In the Italian war he commanded the third corp of the Army of the Aps, and distinguished of the Army of the Arps, and distinguished himself at Magenta by his personal valour, and at Selferino by the timeliness with which he countervailed an Austrian movement which threatened to place the army in peril. Until recently he held the important and distinguished position of Commander-in-Chief of the army of Paris. Such is a brief and imperfect sketch of the great Generals of France in the present war.

Customs Tariffi.

Our local contemporary appears to have returned 'like a dog to his'-well, the quotation is somewhat hackneyed—on the Pariff question. He invites the public to believe that our Delegates did not do their duty in placing before the electors of British Columbia two choices, and two only, with reference to the tariff and excise.' Now the sapient, would-be statesman who controls the editorial columns of the Standard was told plainly before ever our Delegates lett for O. awa that there could only be the two choices' as he terms it, and the Ottawa Cabinet quite confirmed that opinion. There could be no 'intermediate choice,' no power to have a special tariff, or to deal with our own tariff, and for sufficiently obvious reasons. There is, however, says our con-temporary, one opportunity, and one alone, to modify the provision in the terms of Conto modify the provision is the terms of Con-federation respecting the tarif, and that is for the electors to return only such men as will insist on the Canadian Government granting to the local Government power to impose a license or harbor dues on foreign produce entering for home consumption.' Now if the electors should adopt any such silly angression they would merric postpone Now if the electors should adopt any such silly angrestion they would merely postpone Coolederstion and put farther away the great and palpable benefits which it offers; for there need be no hesitation in affirming that the Canadian Government will never consect to anything of the kind. And we venture to think that he who would postpone the consummation of union for a single year for the sake of pretecting 'grain and butter,' would not be a true friend to the colony. The people of Bittish Columbia may rest well assured of this—that the Delegates did not leave a tingle stone unturned in sceking the greatest possible benefits for their country, and that the result of the negotiations could scarcely have been more satisfactory had the matter been entrusted to the caroior could scarcely have been more satisfactory had the matter been entrusted to the carping cameleon of the Standard, who, it must now be evident, would be satisfied with no terms

Is it All Over ? The grand army of France has capitulated, and the Emperor Napoleon has personally surrendered to King William of Prusais !! At least so save the telegraph : and, with all its recent eccentricities, there would not appear to be much room for doubting the statement. And, after all, it is only the astounding nature of the announcement that staggers one's faith; for have not events pointed towards the possibility of such a contingency almost from the first? Four years ago Prassia humiliated Austria Four years ago Frassia humiliated Austra in seven weeks. Seven weeks ago yestorday France, full of confidence and pride, defied the armies of King William on the oanks of the Rhine, automating her soliciers with the cry, 'On to Berlin!' Yester lay she was a prisoner of Prussia on the benks of the Mensel Is the War over? What will they do with Napoleon and broof? What terms will Prussia exact? Surely France can make peace without fur-ther hamiliation— that is to say, if Prus-it's demands are not unreasonable. If the lews can be relied on Napoleon's cause be regarded as irrevocably lost, and the Great Powers will, in all pro ability, slow away the last representatives of a fatten lynasty in some cut-of-the way took where they may less tendanger the peace of Europe. What may be the nature and extended Pressia's demands we have not yet the means of knowing. That she will exact failed empirication for the expenses of the war may be taken as undounted; but what her expectations in regard to territory may te

The Great Ocean Race.

So completely has public attention been centred on the banks of the Rhine that the great international ocean yacht race has almost escaped attention. the event itself is one worthy of a different fate. As the reader knows, the Cambria (English) and the Dauntless (American) started together on their ocean race from Daunts' Rock, ontside of Queenstown Harbour, at 12:30 on the 4th of July, arriving at New York on the 27th. The following account of the arrival, which we clip from the New York Tribune, will repay a peru-At chout 21 o'clock a Tribune reporter, who had stationed himself on peak of the roof of Jenkinson's Hotel on the Highlands first espied the gafftopsail of a peculiarly rigged yacht, called the attention of the Highland Telegraph operator thereto. It was some time before it was possible to make her out, for at this time she was thirty miles out of sea. Slowly her tops raised until her square sails forward her immense jib and the blue flag with a white ball at the fore, could be described, when the question was settled that the Cambria was in sight. On she came every stitch of canvas set and all drawing -jib, fore and maiosail, equaresail and square topsail and gaff-topsails. close on the starboard tack, the northwest-half-north, pointed straight for for the light-ship. Within fifteen minutes the Dauntless was also sighted making the best of the breeze, standing for the light-ship, the terminus of the race, every sail set and drawing, and westward of the Cambria, For a time the race was exciting. Twentysailed together from a point 3,000 miles distant. During the voyage they were hundreds of miles apart, and here they arrived within a few moments of each other-almost together. The race itself other—almost together. The race user lay between a point 40 miles from Sandy flook and the light ship. The two yaobts seemed to fly through the water and for three-dnarters of an hour no human being could tell which had the advantage. All could tell which had the advantage. All was excitement. Every eye was turned to leeward, every nerve was drawn to its utmost tension as the two versels flew on. Either might win. But the wind, which in the morning had veered from eastward to northwest, seemed to haul round again. For a short time it blew lightly; the Cambria caught the last of it, and the British yacht passed the light ship at 46 minutes past three o'clock. The Dauntless had done nobly and as if conscious of it she sailed on proudly, though beaten, and crossed the mark at 5,05.

About Mad Dogs.

From the Chicago Post.

About these days everybody is look ing out for mad dogs. As any pedes-trian upon the streets is now in daily danger of being worried by (or about) these rabid cannes, the following directions for proceeding in cases of hydrophobia will be found valuable:

If you see a dog approaching you with his mouth open, it is a sure sign he is mad. You will get out of the way at once, knocking as many baby carts and apple women as possible in your retreat. If a dog has his mouth closed, it is a sure sign that he is afflicted with rabies. He scents water and the muscles of his mouth have spasmodically closed on that account.

It the infuriated animal pursues you the best means of escape is by leaping through a show window. The projecting points of glass will discourage the dos from following. Precautions should here be taken, least you be attacked by the properctor of the shop, who is ly tobe mad, also.

The mere bark of a mad dog does not necessarily engender hydrophobia.

A dog usually gets mad when a teakettle is tied to his tail, especially if the ten-kettle be loaded with a tin cup, three sleigh bells the drum of a tin rattle four jack-stones, and a string of ignited fire crackers; but fortunately the infuriated saimal is usually in too much of a hurry, on such occasions to stop and bite anybody. Though he may 'e never so hungry, he hasn't even time for a bite.

When one has been bitten by a rabid dog, he should immediately go to work to secure the animal, in order that his symptoms may be watched. On no account should any violence be done to the dog, who is not to blame for being mad. A French dog may be readily rendered rabid for purposes of experiment by saying 'Bismarck' to him, with a strong accent on the . For the method with German dogs, consult the respectable manufacturer of Bologna sausage.

If one encounters a rabid dog and must be bitten, the only relief is to present one's boot toe, or the fleshy parts of a small boy who can be seized for the occasion. (N B - Boys grow almost everywhere, and can be found at all street corners.) Of course a man bitten by a dog goes mad too; but if your friend refuses water when he comes to the bar, it is by no means positive proof that he is mad. The best and least dangerous dogs are those that were killed last sum-

Wagging the tail is not a symptom of hyrophobia; but if the animal en-deavors to stand upright on the end of the same, it is conclusive evidence that he or she is not right in the mind

As the bair of the same dog will cure the bite, it would be an excellent plan to procure a lock of hair from each dog in town. These, when properly arrangand catalogued, can be carried in the pocket or in a value, and applied promptly after the attack. Cut these directions out and paste them in your hat. On showing them to any intelligent dog, he, seeing you prepared for him, will leave you and select some easier victim.

FELL'S COFFEE, superior to any other brand manufactured on the Coast, may be obtained of all respectable dealers throughou
